The Poznań poet, Wojciech Bąk would stand on Wolności Square to shout to people about the need for freedom, respect and democracy. That was during Stalinism.

He paid for this with humiliation, enslavement and his health. But his greatest tragedy was having a company apartment sought by his fellow writers, Poznań writers.

Is opportunism simply human or is it imposed on people by the epoch and the environment?
Or maybe it is in each of us and waiting to wake up like a carcinogenic gene?
